

NEW BULK SEED WINNOWER

South-East Branch member, Ross Long, has designed and built a Seed Winnower to handle large amounts of used seed in a very short time. Ross purchased a dust extractor for his workshop, but found it was too small to handle the extraction volume required.

Necessity being the mother of invention, he gave some thought to what he would do with it; and came up with the winnower depicted here.

A Victorian visitor to his aviaries was so impressed with the resulting machine that he not only built one for himself, but also drew up the detailed plans for its construction shown on the next page.
